The importance of building systems that last

- The WASH sector faces overwhelming challenges:
  - Growing populations
  - Financing shortfall
  - Infrastructure crisis
  - Water security issues
  - Growing Emergencies
  - Climate change

- ‘Business as usual’ will not be sufficient.
- Delivering universal access requires both developing countries and their development partners to think, do and behave differently.
The SWA Collaborative Behaviors

1. Enhance government leadership of sector planning processes
2. Strengthen and use country systems
3. Use one information and mutual accountability platform
4. Build sustainable water and sanitation sector financing strategies
Enhance government leadership of sector planning processes

Government leadership

- Nationally agreed sector priorities, strategies and plans
- Cycle of planning, monitoring, and learning

Partners should support Governments’ ability and efforts to lead country processes
Strengthen and use country systems

Core country systems

• Effective and transparent management of public resources
• Monitoring and regulating services.

Partners should work toward the strengthening and use of country systems to develop, monitor and regulate services.
Use one information and mutual accountability platform

Demonstrate and demand mutual accountability for sector progress

- Reliable data
- Critical joint reflection
- Adaptive management

Partners should build, share and learn from data and hold each other accountable for results
Build sustainable water and sanitation sector financing strategies

Comprehensive and realistic sector financing strategies

• Financing for the lifecycle
• Mobilize all available sources
• Transparency supports accountability

Partners should build the strategies with a goal of sustainability, equity and transparency
The SWA Collaborative Behaviors

- Enhance government leadership of sector planning processes
- Strengthen and use country systems
- Use one information and mutual accountability platform
- Build sustainable water and sanitation sector financing strategies
Thank you